

“The program was well balanced between the general and specific areas, – media system as a theory and China’s media system in its focus, the lecturers were really helpful and very communicative”.

“There are many possibilities and such a gathering gives a chance to discuss its theme together around the table as a holistic body”.

“I liked all of it for different reasons – Sunday to Tuesday were particularly useful for refreshing my memory and putting what I had read in context – and the fact that we had scholars at the top of their field was wonderful. The feedback that I received on my methods was the best part for me – it gave me confidence, direction and renewed impetus, thanks to the insight of people who really know what they’re doing!”

“According my personal point view, I have seen this school very productive. As the most important academic figures in the field of communication studies gave impressive presentations. We got information from different perspective on media system”.

“With regard to the International Journalism Festival, as the Spring School main focus were on China, I have found this activity an interesting adding to this school, in particular for those researchers who involved on China studies. This session gave significant insight on media system from both of industrial (practical) and academic fields”.

“I really benefitted from the numerous insights on Media Studies in general and on their application to China. I think the methodology coming from this field of studies could improve my actual research project”.